About the conference

Welcome to James Cook University's Learning and Teaching Week 2024, "Celebrating Transformative Education." In an era where higher education is experiencing tumultuous times in teaching and learning, join us to celebrate and reflect on educators' experiences of change and transformations. This enriching event is designed to explore and celebrate transformations in educational practices and technologies, bringing together educators, researchers, and industry experts to share insights and foster discussions on the future of education.

Join with colleagues to explore key themes, including but not limited to:

- Innovations in Learning and Teaching: Showcasing cutting-edge methodologies and technologies.
- Generative AI in Education: Enhancing personalised learning experiences while addressing ethical considerations.
- Sustainability in Education: Exploring strategies to embed sustainability into curricula and promoting environmental awareness.
- Equity and Inclusion: Highlighting initiatives aimed at creating inclusive environments.
- Technology-Enhanced Learning: Examining the impact of digital tools on education.
- Student-Centered Learning Approaches: Emphasising the fostering of student autonomy and engagement.

How to get involved?

1. Posters: Submission instructions below.
2. Keynotes: Attend keynotes, grant presentations, teaching excellence awards, Scholarship of Learning and Teaching Symposium and Learning and Teaching Trivia both on campus in Townsville and online. Registration links will be forwarded soon.
